First People's Principles of Learning

- Learning is embedded in memory, history, and story.

Introduction

- Show the 2 minute video Push Pull Factors in Immigration about the history of immigration to Canada.
- Ask: Why would people want to leave their home countries? Why would people choose Canada as their new home?

Pre-Assessment

Engage students in discussion of the following questions:

- Has Canada always welcomed people who want to come here?
- Has Canada treated immigrants fairly?

Interactive Learning Activities

Part One: What is Discrimination?

- Begin by asking students what discrimination means. Provide a definition of discrimination as “an action or a decision that treats a person or a group badly for reasons such as their age or skin colour”.
- Organize students in groups of 4 or 5. Provide 5 minutes for groups to list ways a person could experience discrimination.
- Have groups take turns sharing examples. Do not allow repetition.
- Explain that the Canadian Human Rights Act protects people against discrimination based on a number of reasons.
- Provide students with a copy of the Grounds for Discrimination Chart and Examples of Discrimination. Have them work in pairs to place the examples into correct category in the chart.

Part Two: The Komagata Maru Incident

- Show Canada Post’s commemorative stamp of the Komagata Maru 100th Anniversary.
- Ask students if they have heard about this incident. What do they already know?
- Have students read Canada Post’s description of the Komagata Maru Incident and work with a partner to complete the Komagata Maru Incident 5 W Pyramid.
- Ask what types of discrimination this incident represents. (race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion) Point out that the passengers were British subjects and Canada was also part of the British Commonwealth.
- Ask what laws were created to exclude Asian people, such as the passengers of the Komagata Maru, from entering Canada? (continuous journey law and $200 tax)
- Ask why it is important for Canadians to remember this event. (learn from mistakes and make positive changes)

Part Three: Immigration Policy Timeline:

- Provide students with access to Canadian Immigration Acts and Legislation.
- Have students determine the top ten most significant changes to Canadian immigration policy.
- Have students place these ten immigration acts and legislation on a timeline to show how Canadian immigration policies have changed over the past 150 years. You may want to have student use a digital timeline creator such as this one from Read Write Think.

Lesson Four: Making Reparations for Past Wrongs

- Show the video Komagata Maru: Why the apology matters, more than a century later
- After watching the video, have students discuss the following questions:
 - What do you think can be learned from the Komagata Maru Incident?
 - What are the benefits of the government apologizing for a past injustice?
 - What are the problems with an apology for something that happened a long time ago?
- Have students work in small groups to complete the T-Chart: Are Apologies Enough? Encourage students consider the importance and limitations of government apologies for historic injustices.

Post-Assessment

Journal:

- How have your ideas changed about immigration in Canada changed?
- What are the 3 most important things you have learned from your study of the Komagata Maru incident?

Extension Activities

- Find out how fast a steam ship such as the Komagata Maru could travel back in the early 1900's.
- Next, figure out the distance from Calcutta to Vancouver by sea. How long would it have taken the Komagata Maru to get to Vancouver? Show your work and explain how you figured it out.

Examples of Discrimination

A bank has lending rules that make it unreasonably difficult for new immigrants to get loans.

A person is systematically referred to secondary screening at airports due to the colour of their skin.

An employer assigns her employees to weekend shifts without recognizing that some employees observe the Sabbath and cannot work on those days.

An employer's physical fitness requirements are based on the capabilities of an average 25 year old instead of being based on the actual requirements of the job.

A female employee with an excellent performance record announces that she is pregnant. Immediately, her employer begins to identify problems that lead to her dismissal.

A government provides less money per student for First Nations children living on reserves than it provides for children in other communities.

A policy provides benefits to some straight married couples but not to gay married couples.

After having a child, a woman cannot find childcare to continue working overnight shifts, and her employer does not allow flexibility by scheduling her on day shifts.

An employer requires all employees to have a valid driver's licence. People who cannot drive due to a disability are not given an opportunity to show how they could still perform the job by, for example, using public transit.

A person is denied a job because of a previous conviction for which a pardon has been granted or a record has been suspended.

Someone is denied a job because they shared the results of their genetic testing with a potential employer.

A policy requires that a person identifies themselves as either male or female.

A landlord refuses to rent an apartment to a single parent.
